FROM THE Anchor Club.

No. I.

They bawl for freedom in their senseless mood,
Yet still revolt when truth would set them free.
Licence they mean, when they cry LIBERTY,
For who loves that must first be wise and good.

Milton.

IF rational liberty was ever dear, and anarchy horrible and destructive; if the sacred religion and pure morality of our fathers, was ever revered for its divine authority and benign effects; if laws and customs produced by the accumulated experience of ages, have ever been useful to mankind; if domestic comfort and social order was ever enjoyed and duly estimated; if private virtue and public integrity were ever just and honorable; if, in short, all that can render life amiable and desirable,—all that can adorn and exalt civilized humanity,—have ever been duly appreciated, how great should be the alarm, when danger threatens in every shape, and from every quarter? If ever one period of time was more exigent and momentous than another, it is surely the present; when sedition, in the garb of patriotism, stalks abroad, profusely throwing on every side the seeds of discontent and discord; when faction openly rears his unblushing front; when, like the giant Antaus, it seems to have recovered fresh strength from having been once beaten to the ground, and now proudly hurls defiance in our teeth: if the present important crisis will not arouse sluggish supineness, and invigorate torpid apathy, we may conclude our fellow citizens to possess little more than vegetable existence, and rank them with those baleful weeds, whose destructive fœcundity chokes up the useful grain.

This is not poetic fiction, nor empty declamation, the danger of our situation cannot be exaggerated, nor is it necessary to multiply terrors to excite unnecessary alarm, let any one seriously survey the conduct of Jacobins, and say if it is possible for preparation to be too prompt, and caution too keen and vigilant; let him look at the machinations of the faction in Virginia, and some adjoining states; mark their progress, the mode by which they have indefatigably prosecuted their purposes; and tremble at the alarming height at which they have arrived. They have dared, yes, the majority of a single state assembly has openly dared to condemn one of the first of all constitutional functions in a representative government, the passing of laws by a majority; they have censured the chosen executive of the people for carrying those laws into effect; and they have in terms not to be misunderstood, invited the people to resistance, by sophistical reasoning, imposed upon their judgment by artful misrepresentation, affected humility, and the cant of public love, have inflamed their passions and left no means untried to excite rebellion. It is true the minority have expressed their abhorrence and indignation at such proceedings, and in their most excellent and judicious counter-Address, by the fairest reasoning, and most powerful argument, given a complete refutation to the creed of sedition. But erroneous principles and moral depravity are seldom eradicated by argument: the experience of the world may convince us, that nothing but coercive measures can curb sedition, and tear up the roots of anarchy. What can a virtuous and enlightened minority do against a partial and interested majority, with a turbulent, blind, licentious populace at their command? What shadow of reason can be given for supposing they will stop here, and what preparation is there now actually organized to oppose them, should they go on? Has any other state formally expressed their disapprobation, and is there any appearance of general indignation discovered in the people? no, it has passed by as the common report of a day, the course of exchange, or the price of flour. To convince would be sufficient, if mankind were generally virtuous; but the mass of men are neither virtuous nor rational, they had rather adopt any opinion, than be at the trouble of thinking for themselves; and as reason has no influence in the choice, the preference is generally given to what accords with their strongest passions and favorite propensities.

This we all know, and every day offers instances; yet if a man fancies he is right himself, he is content to recline on the idle couch of mere speculative principle, regardless of his neighbor, and taking no pains to practice or propagate, what can only be rendered effectual by energy and activity. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, and be wise" said Solomon; and the politician may as justly say to the negligent people, go to the manufacturers of treason, and the artificers of rebellion, and learn to be industrious; it is not by their virtue or their agument that they can conquer us, it is by their superior exertions, their energy, unanimity and perseverance; surely then, it is time to wake and shake off the dreams of false security—to use that judgment which truth induces—that courage which a good cause inspires—and that vigilance and exertion which alone can render abortive the intrigues and menaces of our enemies.

CORIOLANUS.

LONG ISLAND.

At a respectable meeting of a number of the inhabitants of the eastern part of the township of Huntington, in the county of Suffolk, and state of New-York, held at the house of Amos Willets, in said town, on the third day of January, 1799 for the purpose of taking into consideration the present tumultuous situation of our country, respecting the present administration of government.

Resolved, That Moses Blachly be chairman of this meeting, and that Daniel Keley be clerk.

Resolved, That all meetings for deliberating on public affairs ought to be convened by public notice; and as a meeting has lately been held in this town for the said purpose without sufficient public notice having been previously given to the inhabitants thereof, therefore,

Resolved, That we do wholly disapprove of the conduct of said meeting, being fully persuaded the sense of the majority of the people was not taken thereby.

Resolved, That we will support the Constitution of the United States, and the present administration thereof, in opposition to that party spirit, which has for a long time, and still continues to disturb the repose and tarnish the characters of our fellow citizens in many parts of the Union.

Resolved, That when any town pass resolutions derogatory to the character of any public officer, we conceive such resolves to be inflammatory and destructive of our government.

Resolved that Moses Blachly and Amos Willets, be a committee on the part of this meeting, to inculcate the principles contained in the foregoing resolves, and to transmit our proceedings for publication.

Sigued by order of the meeting.

MOSES BLACHLY, Chairman.
Daniel Keley, Clerk.

From a Paris Paper.

Letter from the Minister of the Marine

On the 4th Complementary Day, Sept. 20, the brig of the Republic, the Anacreon returning from the coasts of Ireland, having on board Napper Tandy, a detachment of light artillery, and several Volunteer officers fell in, off the Orkneys, with a brig and a three masted vessel named the Tom of Lancaster. These vessels, as soon as they perceived the Anacreon bore down to attack her, and an engagement took place, but as the Anacreon had only four pounders to oppose to the twelve and fourteen pounders of the enemy, she would infallibly have been taken or sunk, had not the Officers belonging to the expedition, and a brave detachment of the 2d regiment of light artillery, who were on board, incensed at receiving the enemy's fire without being able to return it, loudly called for leave to board, amidst reiterated acclamation of Vive la Republique.

This manœuvre was immediately executed, notwithstanding the vollies of grape-shot discharged by the English, who frightened by the audacity of the French, soon abandoned the deck to take shelter below. Thus these two vessels which fell upon the Anacreon, as certain of making her a prize, were captured in an instant, and forced to strike their flags and surrender, though with a numerous artillery well served, to a handful of brave Republicans.

(Signed) SCHERER.

VIENNA, November 28.

The latest advices from Italy mention, that a division of the Russian and Turkish fleets appeared off Corfu and summoned the garrison to surrender; But this being refused and opposition made, they had taken possession of the harbour and the French shipping in it by force, and landed a considerable body of troops, who forced the French to retire to their fortress at Balley Mezzo, which would be immediately bombarded. The Greek inhabitants received the invaders with open arms.

Another division of the above-mentioned fleet blockades Ancona, and the British fleet Civit. Vechia and Genoa.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 5.

The Porte has notified the ministers of the allied courts, that Aly pacha, governor of Janina (Thessalia) had taken three ex-Venatian posts in Albany, from the French, and was about attacking the fourth and only one in their possession. He has taken 50 prisoners, among whom are two generals and several other officers.

There is now a French newspaper published at Cairo, entitled, Courier d' Eypte, edited by citizen Marc Aurel.

AN ADDRESS

Of the SELECT and COMMON COUNCILS to the CITIZENS of PHILADELPHIA.

Fellow-Citizens,

PERSUADED that the introduction of a copious supply of wholesome water into the city of Philadelphia, is an object of primary importance to the convenience, welfare and health of its inhabitants; and that it will prove one of the most effectual means of cleansing the streets and sewers from all putrid and noxious matter, and thereby improve the state of our atmosphere; your representatives in Select and Common Councils, have had this subject under their serious consideration, and anxious for its accomplishment by means the least oppressive to their constituents whilst labouring under the severe effects of the late pestilential fever, seconded your petition to the Legislature for aid to obtain this desirable object.

Contemplating a grant of this aid, your Councils have been occupied in deriving information from a variety of sources, and have satisfactory reason to believe in the practicability of a plan, which, if early pursued, promises an abundant supply of water in the course of the present year, if not before the termination of the next summer months, and in a manner not to be materially, if at all, effected by the variation of the seasons.

Repeated have been the calls on your Councils to adopt measures for obtaining a supply of water—To these applications they have given the requisite attention—They have long deliberated—you are now apprized of the result. In the present situation of their means, no plan has occurred, within their power to accomplish, more likely to succeed, or more compatible with your interests, than the one they design to pursue; no means of acquiring the indispensible fund, so feasible, as the plan submitted to your view and approbation.

Until the Legislature shall, in its wisdom and humanity, extend some effectual relief to its capital, your Councils believe the most eligible, if not the only practicable mode of procuring the necessary sum, will be by Loan. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars are wanted, and if fifteen hundred citizens can be found, willing to subscribe one hundred dollars each, towards the promotion of an object so deeply interesting to us all, the corporation will issue transferrable certificates and provide adequate means to pay the interest, and an annual sinking fund to redeem the principal.

To induce you to advance this Capital, no lucrative speculation, or extraordinary profit, can, with propriety, be held up to your view—You are invited to no risks—Public spirit, and an interest in the future prosperity or decline of your city, must be your incitements—Full security for the principal, and common interest, are the terms—A temporary advance of a small part of your property, may preserve the value of the whole.

Your Councils having no interests separate from those of their constituents, can, in what they thus recommend, have no views but such as in their opinion tend to the public good.

It rests with you to say, whether this work shall, or shall not be undertaken. If encouragement be given, by a prompt and liberal subscription, it will be commenced.

Should the present call fail of the desired success, we may, as individual citizens, deplore the unhappy event; but as men, to whom a public trust has been delegated, we shall derive consolation from a conviction of having discharged our duty.

KEARNY WHARTON,
President of Common Council.
FRANCIS GURNEY,
President of the Select Council.
Philadelphia, February 7, 1799.

AN ORDINANCE,

Providing for the raising of a Sum of Money on loan for supplying the city of Philadelphia with wholesome water.

WHEREAS the speedy introduction of a copious supply of wholesome water is deemed essential to the health and preservation of this city, and from information communicated to the Select and Common Councils, there appears sufficient reason to believe an adequate supply thereof can be introduced within the compass of the present year, if the necessary sum or capital for defraying the expence can be obtained. And though there is reason to hope a liberal aid will be granted by the legislature, towards enabling the city to complete this important work: Yet the speedy accomplishment thereof, appears to require the immediate exertions and resources of the citizens of Philadelphia, for producing the benefits contemplated thereby, within the course of the approaching summer season.

Sec. 1. Be it therefore ordained and enacted by the Citizens of Philadelphia in Select and Common Councils, assembled, That the whole of the income of the corporate estates of the citizens of Philadelphia, and other adequate and sufficient provision which are within the means and power of the City Corporation, (excepting the ferry and bridge at the west end of High-street) shall be pledged, and the same are, (together with any aid the Commonwealth may be hereafter induced to grant) hereby pledged for the payment of the interest and for the redemption of the principal of a sum not exceeding, in the whole, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, which any person, or number of persons, or bodies politic, or corporate, (with the patriotic view of promoting the health and safety of the city) may and shall advance on loan a capital to the amount of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as aforesaid, for the purpose of obtaining the introduction of a copious supply of wholesome water into this city.

Sec. 2. And be it further ordained and enacted, That Edward Tilghman, Jared Ingersoll, Stephen Girard, Jesse Wain, Levi Hollingsworth, Leonard Jacoby, John Inskeep, Jacob Shoemaker, Joseph Cruikshank, William Jones, Jonathan Robinson, and Thomas Haskins, be, and they are hereby appointed commissioners to execute and perform the several duties hereinafter mentioned, that is to say, They shall and may with all convenient expedition procure one or more suitable books and therein enter as follows:

"We whose names are hereunto subscribed do promise to pay to the Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of Philadelphia towards constituting a Capital to defray the expence of introducing water for the use of the Citizens of Philadelphia, the sum of one hundred dollars for every share of said stock set opposite to our respective names; and to pay the same in such manner, proportions and times, as is provided for in an ordinance entitled, An Ordinance providing for the raising of a sum of money on loan for supplying the city of Philadelphia with wholesome water." And the said Commissioners shall thereupon, after giving due public notice, proceed in such manner and at such places as they may think it expedient, with all diligence to open the said book or books and invite and receive the subscriptions of any person or persons, or bodies politic or corporate who shall offer to subscribe therein for any share or number of shares until the said book or books shall have subscribed therein the number of fifteen hundred shares; and when the said number of shares shall be subscribed at any time within thirty days to be computed from the opening of said book or books: or if only six hundred shares are subscribed at the expiration of the said thirty days, the said Commissioners shall return to the Mayor of this city a full and perfect list of all the subscriptions to said capital, with the number of shares subscribed certified under their hands and seals, and shall pay to the Treasurer of the city all monies they shall have received by virtue thereof, and if the number of shares so returned and certified shall be less than fifteen hundred, but shall amount to six hundred shares, the books shall be kept open for further subscriptions at such times and places as the Commissioners may hereafter appoint, of which times and places they shall give due and public notice.

Sec. III. And be it further ordained and enacted, That the payments to be made by the subscribers on each share of the aforsaid capital shall be in manner and time as follows, that is to say, ten dollars to be paid to the commissioners at the time of subscription and the residue to the Treasurer of the city to wit, thirty dollars at the expiration of two months from the time of subscription; thirty dollars at the expiration of four months from the time of subscription; and thirty dollars at the expiration of six monts from the time of subscription. And on the completion of the last payment certificates signed by the Mayor, and countersigned by the City Treasurer shall be delivered to the subscribers respectively for each share or number of shares by them subscribed, which certificates shall entitle each subscriber or his legal attorney or assigns to receive an interest thereon, at the rate of six per cent. per annum to be paid half yearly by the Treasurer of the city, and shall be severally transferable by the subscribers or their legal attorney or assigns by indorsement thereon at the office and in the presence of the Treasurer for the time being—And that if any subscriber to any share or shares of the aforesaid capital shall fail or neglect to make good any payment within thirty days from and after the respective times as herein before required, every such subscriber so failing and neglecting shall forfeit all the sum or sums which may have been previously paid; and the same shall be applied to the use and benefit of the city as an aid for defraying the expences of introducing a supply of water.

Sec. IV. And be it further ordained and enacted, That so soon as a copious supply of water shall be introduced into the streets of the city, and be ready for distribution under such general and equal regulations as fitting to the occasion may hereafter be established, it shall at the conduits emptying into the streets be for the free use of all persons, and every subscriber to the said capital shall be entitled in the first instance to a preference of supply to one dwelling house for each share so subscribed to be taken from the street pipes or conduits subject to the general regulation aforesaid, and shall enjoy the use and convenience of said supply for the full term of three years free of any charge of water rent.

Sec. V. And be it further ordained and enacted, That all rents or other emoluments which may arise from the use and application of said water shall in the first instance be applied for defraying the expences of superintendance and of repairs and improvements of necessary works for the better accommodation and supply of the city with water; in the second instance to the redemption of the aforesaid capital stock, and thereafter for any further improvements to the city of Philadelphia, or in aid and alleviation of taxes on its inhabitants.

Sec. VI. And be it further ordained and enacted, That on the receipt and payment of all monies which shall arise on the subscriptions to the capital stock as aforesaid the treasurer of this city shall be entitled to a commission at the rate of fifty cents for every hundred dollars so received and paid, and no more. And the said Treasurer shall keep all monies arising therefrom in the Bank of Pennsylvania, and shall also keep an account of the receipts and payments thereon and thereout, distinct from all other monies coming into and passing through his hand from any other source whatever.

Enacted into an ordinance at Philadelphia on this seventh day of February (L. S. C.) in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine.

KEARNY WHARTON,
President of the Common Council.
FRANCIS GURNEY,
President of the Select Council.

MR. FENNO,

Being one of the citizens of the United States, and consequently one, to whom a manifesto of the extraordinary envoy, George Logan, is addressed.—Being also one of those benighted mortals, whom the Aurora (select vehicle of the communication) never "rises to irradiate" this favor of the Doctor's, by the diffusion of another press, has but just come to hand. Living also at a considerable distance from the metropolis, beyond woods and forests, through which the name of Stenton, has but now, for the first time penetrated, it might be extremely difficult to convey my answer, to what I take to be the humble retreat of this retired, unobtrusive citizen. Through the medium, therefore, of your Gazette, I beg leave to suggest a very few observations; haply they may reach his chaste, republican ears.*

His justification then, against what he calls the slander of persons high in office, is founded on two positions.—First, That a state of war is inevitably attended with so many calamities, that an enlightened nation will seek every honorable means to avoid it. And secondly, That our situation with respect to France is peculiarly delicate, having received from that nation, the most essential services, during our arduous struggle against the wanton injuries and oppressions of the British government.

But how can the first position excuse the conduct of George Logan, unless we are to substitute him for a nation. "An enlightened nation will always seek all honorable means of avoiding a war," but does it thence follow, that every enlightened member of the nation is to assume the conduct of its concerns? And admitting, as to the second position, the peculiar delicacy of our situation with respect to France:—May it not with propriety be asked, what is here meant by the word France? If to France, we annex a mere geographic idea of a certain tract of country, a portion of the globe, I cannot admit that we are under any obligation to it. And if by it or the word nation, we intend those who have consigned to eternal sleep the persons who really conferred the essential services alluded to, still less can I allow their implied claim to our gratitude. The terms of France and the nation, as to certain purposes, are sufficiently accurate and appropriate. Like corporations or bodies politic, which in contemplation of law, never die, they have perpetual succession, and may be competent to the demand of a pecuniary obligation, the exaction of a tribute, or other matter of negotiation; but on a question of gratitude, we have nothing to do with inanimate substances or mere political existences, and are not thus, I trust, to be swindled out of our moral ideas.

Under these impressions, however, the good doctor sets out upon his travels. At Hamburgh he meets with general La Fayette, who views, as he informs us, with particular anxiety, the existing difficulties between the two republics. This is very probable, as it also is, that citizen Merlin (as citizen Logan gravely assures us) said, that France had not the least intention to interfere with the public affairs of the United States. Citizen Genet said the same, and so did citizens Fauchet and Adet. But though we are told of La Fayette's anxiety on account of the existing difficulties between the two republics, we are not let into his opinion, as to the best means of removing them, or whether the great nation were more likely to be appeased by three legitimate envoys, or by a solitary, self-constituted functionary. So that to the single circumstance, of the general's facilitating the doctor's journey to Paris, we are indebted for the agreeable episode of their meeting; and considering the incalculable importance of this journey, what critic or patriot will say, that it is not what Horace calls a "dignus vindice nodus," or an occasion well worthy the appearance of the general!

As to the doctor's conversations with the citizens of France, and the strangers whom he met in Paris, and the great respect he at all times expressed for his country, I have nothing to object. What less could be expected from a patriot, who journied at his own expence, of his own spontaneous motion, to do for his country, what the whole weight and united wisdom of its public councils had failed to accomplish! Whether the favorable circumstances which occurred whilst the doctor was at Paris, such as the removal of the embargo, the release and kind treatment of our seamen, are to be ascribed to a veneration for his transcendant civism, or to the spirited tone of our government; or whether the directory, like Falstaff, are only moved to justice by entreaty and not by compulsion, I am content shall remain secrets of state and subjects of future discussion. Neither will I attempt an apology for the unaccountable conduct of the secretary of state in rejecting the dispatches; nor for the government refusing to substitute facts for insinuation.

One problem, however, I beg leave to suggest for the consideration of the Spontaneous envoy, enlightened statesman and legislator. And that is, Whether a state of war is so extremely calamitous, that no possible case can be conceived, wherein the policy of engaging in it, may be justified; or, whether this extreme repugnance is only restricted to the case of two republics?

Upon the whole, with respect to this distinguished personage, who has already made so much noise in the world, and whose philanthropic embassy will doubtless descend with increasing lustre to posterity, I conclude in the words of the king of Prussia on Voltaire, "That George Logan would be an extraordinary man, and that an extraordinary man he certainly is."

CONGRESS,

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, February 8.

Mr. Gregg moved that the petition of Robert Sturgeon, late a collector of the revenue of the United States, imprisoned in the goal of Lewis County in this state, for debt due to the United States, heretofore presented, be referred to a select committee. Mr. G. stated, the difficulties which this officer had under-gone in the performance of his duty; that a part of the money which he had collected had been paid to the United States, and the rest expended in the performance of his duty. He also stated him as suffering considerably from his confinement, from being allowed only bread and water for his support,—Referred.

Mr. Nicholas presented a petition from the inhabitants of Staiford, in Virginia, praying for a post-office at Woodstock—Referred.

Mr. S. Smith, from the committee of commerce reported the bill to establish the compensation of officers employed in collecting the duties on imposts and tonnage, and for other purposes, which was committed.

On motion of Mr. Otis, a petition from the weighers of Boston; and on that of Mr. Livingston, one of the same nature from New-York, was referred to the same committee.

Mr. D. Foster, from the committee of claims, made an unfavourable report on the petition of Seth Harding an officer in the late war, which was concurred in.

The house resolved itself into a committee of the whole on the bill for the augmentation of the navy, and fixing the pay of the captains of ships or vessels of war, when Mr. Gallatin's motion for striking out what relates to 74 gun ships being resumed, after some observations from Mr. Josiah Parker & Mr. Harper against it, and from Mr. Nicholas in favour of it, the question was put and negatived 50 to 40.

Mr. J. Williams then moved to strike out what relates to 18 gun vessels, on the ground that the 39 small vessels which we have are sufficient. The motion was negatived without a division.

Mr. J. Parker proposed filling up the blanks in the section fixing the pay of captains in the Navy, with an advance from 75 dollars to 100 dollars a month, to Captains of 74's, and others in proportion; except the masters of vessels under 20 guns, which were proposed to be lowered.

Some objection, however, being made to this, and particularly to the mode of doing the business, this being the first time that the subject had been before the house, the section was moved to be struck out, and carried.

The committee then rose, and the house having concurred in the amendment reported.

Mr. Nicholas renewed the motion for striking out the 74 gun ships, and called the Yeas and Nays upon it. They were taken as follow:

The bill was then ordered to be engrossed for a third reading.

The bill for the relief of Thomas Lewis, was read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. J. Parker, the house resolved itself into committees of the whole, on the two following bills, which were reported without debate or amendment, viz.

The bill authorising the establishment of Docks; and

The bill authorising the purchase of Timber for Naval purposes.

They were severally ordered to be engrossed for a third reading to-morrow.

Mr. Hartley said, that since presenting the petition which he had laid before the house from York County, praying for a repeal of certain laws, he had been written to on the subject, he gave notice, therefore, that he should call up the petition for consideration on Monday.

The Speaker saying it would be necessary to make it the order for that day, Mr. Hartley made that motion, which was carried.

POSTSCRIPT.

Extract of a letter from Lisbon, Nov. 26.

"I have a letter from Genoa, Nov. 1, giving an account that a squadron of 4 sail of the line, British, had burnt every one of the transports which had conducted Buonaparte's army to Egypt, at anchor in the old and new ports of Alexandria, on the 30th September last. Hostilities are again commenced between the Austrians and the French in the country of the Grisons. The King of Naples has on the actual march to his frontiers 120,000 men. We may expect to hear very shortly the island of Malta being in possession of its inhabitants, as the French garrison in two or three forties have been very unsuccessful, the greater part having fallen victims to the revenge of the Maltese."

[The respectability of the gentleman who writes this letter, the uniform correctness of his former intelligence, the lateness of the dates, and the comparative vicinity of Genoa to the theatre of action, induce us to place much faith in the account.]

Extract of a letter from the Consul of the United States at Gibraltar, dated November 19, 1798.

"We learn that several French privateers have been laid up at Malaga; as four have been lately captured by the Algerines. We have not heard of any formal declaration from the Regency; but as the Grand Seignor has declared war against France, I suppose they look upon it to be sufficient for them to capture.

"The Expedition that sailed from hence, has taken possession of the Island of Minorca, without opposition except Citadela (the citadel) which it was expected would also soon capitulate."

Extract of a letter from Lisbon, dated 4th December, 1798.

"A cutter arrived here last night from Gibraltar with the important intelligence of the surrender of Malta, where the English have taken the Gullaume Tell, Dianne, and Justice, which had escaped admiral Nelson off the Nile. Buonaparte's army is said to be reduced to 5,000 men by disease; and the port of Alexandria is blocked up by the Russian and Turkish fleets. The king of Naples is said to have marched 100,000 men into the Roman Republic."

WHEREAS,
BY an Act of Congreſs paſſed on the ſixteenth day of July in the year of our Lord one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety eight, the Preſident of the United States is authoriſed to borrow on behalf of the United States from the Bank of the United States, or from any other body or bodies politic or corporate, or from any perſon or perſons, and upon ſuch terms and conditions as he ſhall judge moſt advantageous for the United States, a ſum not exceeding five millions of dollars, ſo however, that no contract or engagement be made which ſhall preclude the United States from reimburſing any ſum or ſums borrowed at any time after the expiration of fifteen years from the date of ſuch loan. And whereas, it is declared by the ſaid Act, that ſo much as may be neceſſary of the ſurplus of the duties on Imports and Tonnage beyond the permanent appropriations heretofore charged upon them by law, ſhall be pledged and appropriated for paying the intereſt, and alſo for paying and diſcharging the principal ſum or ſums of all the monies which may be borrowed, according to the term or terms which may be fixed, purſuant to the authority aforeſaid—And whereas by the ſaid Act, the faith of the United States is pledged to eſtabliſh ſufficient permanent Revenues for making up any deficiency that may hereafter appear in the proviſions before-mentioned for paying the intereſt and principal ſums, or either of them, of any monies which may be borrowed purſuant to the ſaid Act. And whereas the Preſident of the United States did by an Act or Commiſſion under his hand dated the ninth day of January in the year one thouſand ſeven hundred and ninety nine, authoriſe and empower, the Secretary of the Treaſury, to borrow on behalf of the United States, any ſum not exceeding in the whole, five millions of dollars and to make ſuch contract or contracts as ſhould be neceſſary, and for the intereſt of the United States, in purſuance of the Act of Congreſs above recited.
Now therefore, the underſigned, Secretary of the Treaſury, in purſuance of the Act of Congreſs, and the authority from the Preſident of the United States, above mentioned, doth hereby on behalf of the United States of America, contract and engage in manner following, to wit.
1ſt. A book for receiving ſubſcriptions to a Loan of five millions of dollars for the uſe of the United States ſhall be opened in the city of Philadelphia, at the Bank of the United States on Thurſday the twenty eighth day of February enſuing, which book ſhall continue open for the purpoſe of receiving ſubſcriptions, until the whole of the ſaid five millions of dollars ſhall be ſubſcribed. If more than five millions of dollars ſhall be ſubſcribed on the firſt day of opening the ſaid loan, the ſurplus ſhall be deducted in proportion to the ſums ſubſcribed by individuals, exceeding four thouſand dollars.
2d. For every hundred dollars which may be ſubſcribed there ſhall be forthwith depoſited and paid the ſum of twelve dollars and fifty cents, and like payments of twelve dollars and fifty cents, ſhall be made within the firſt ten days of the months of April, May, June, July, Auguſt September and October enſuing. The Secretary of the Treaſury however reſerves the right of reducing the number of inſtallments by ſpecial agreements, with the individuals who may become ſubſcribers.
3d. On the failure of payment of any inſtallment of the ſums ſubſcribed according to the tenor of the ſecond article, the next preceeding inſtallment of twelve dollars and fifty cents, which ſhall have been paid, for every hundred dollars ſubſcribed ſhall be forfeited to the United States.
